

Three selected for Cumbrian cricket trials

Ullmayer Sylvester, Stanton Williams' Larissa Johnston and The Schtip are finalists to design £100,000 self-build for Coniston Cricket Club

CUMBRIA The AJ can reveal the schemes by the three practices shortlisted in the competition to design a new pavilion for Coniston Cricket Club.

The concepts for the £100,000 building, which will replace 'a series of sheds containing multitudinous lawnmowers', have been drawn up by finalists Ullmayer Sylvester Architects, Stanton Williams' architect Larissa Johnston with structural engineer Rodrigues Associates, and artist/architect collective The Schtip.

Launched in March this year, the contest attracted 83 entries from around the world, including submissions from Malaysia, Germany, Spain, Portugal, Sweden and the UAE.

The community-led, self-build project is being backed by the Coniston Institute and Cumbrian collective Grizedale Arts.

The teams have until the end of October to submit their final designs. Richard Waite

SHORT-LISTED

ULLMAYER SYLVESTER

SHORT-LISTED

THE SCHTIP

SHORT-LISTED

LARISSA JOHNSTON

COMPETITIONS FILE

MARK LAKOMCSIK

Open-City is teaming up with The Photographers' Gallery and The AJ for its annual photography contest celebrating Open House weekend (21-22 Sept, details at: www.openhouselondon.org.uk). Enter with a photo 'celebrating architecture, people and place' via www.flickr.com/groups/openhouselondon. Bookings are now open for Open House London; book on the website.

University College Birmingham is looking for architects to design the 25,900m² second phase of its campus development. Buildings must maximise flexibility for future adaptations, and should mirror phase one's BREEAM Excellent rating. Phase two will be taken to a minimum of RIBA Stage 3. [Requests to participate due 20 September]

Design teams are sought for the £5 million redevelopment of the Pleasance complex in Edinburgh. Architects are called to design a more 'flexible and attractive' interior layout for the six Grade B-listed buildings. The appointed team will also manage the works to occupation. [PQQs available until 17 September]

Sean Kitchen
TheAJ.co.uk/competitions

THE AJ DOES NOT ORGANISE, ENDORSE OR TAKE RESPONSIBILITY FOR COMPETITIONS